

A LITTLE BIT OF BUZZ'S HISTORY...

Back in the mid 1700's, Georgetown was a thriving trading post for almost half the countries' rice crops. During this time a local pirate set up shop to provide all the traders and locals with a place to gather for great food and spirits. This pirate was known to all the locals as "Buzz" because he was never seen sober but rather always a little "buzzed".

Buzz ran, what was formerly called the "Roost," on Front Street for years until he met his demise early one morning out on the docks. Buzz unfortunately had a little too much ale for breakfast when he slipped off the back dock and was eaten by alligators. Since that day there has always been a sign posted out back that says "No Drinks Beyond This Point" because we want to feed you lunch, not feed you to the alligators...
